

Presentation Introduction

(to be read before the beginning of the presentation)

Hello everyone and welcome to Sex Signals. Before we begin, please take a moment to turn off all cell phones. Also, due to copyright, any audio or video recording of this program is strictly prohibited.

It should be noted that Sex Signals uses humor, candid dialogue, and some strong language. The language is not meant to offend or minimize, but mirror and comment on the way our culture can talk about sex. Please also note that this prevention program discusses sexual violence and harassment. If you become uncomfortable or need to step out at any time, please feel free to do so. Our resources _____ and _____ are available if you'd like to speak with anyone.

Our presenters, _____ and _____, are nationally touring actors and educators. They join us from Catharsis Productions, empowering audiences around the world to build healthier, safer communities, one conversation at a time. The show they're presenting features scripted material as well as improvisation and audience interaction. Your participation is therefore important. Please do so only when the performers address you, and be respectful of your fellow audience members. Thank you for your attention. Now please give a round of applause and join me in welcoming, Sex Signals!
